AN ITALIAN BANKER NAMED O'BRIEN

Is Likely to Be a Shark, Banker Gebliso Tells Senator Hill's Committee, The Senate Committee which is investigating the workings of Eliis Island met again yesterday in the Hotel New Netherland. The alleged violation of the Contract Labor law was the matter under discussion. John Conklin, an inspector at Ellis Island. testified that there was no doubt in his mind that the Italian bankers and the padrones worked together in the business of supplying railroads and other corporations with laborers. H. Maitland Kersov, agent of the White Star line, said the new, immigration law was working well, except that the various lines considered it a hardship that immigrants should be grouped on the piers instead of at Eills Island. "Dr. Senner has auggested." said the witness, "that the people be drilled at sea in grouping themselves into flocks of thirty, and this we are trying to do."

The next witness was Assistant United States District Attorney Mott. who was on Thursday accused by John Flerabend, a witness before the committee, of pigeonholing a case of violation of the Contract Labor law

Thursday accused by John Flerabend, a witness before the committee, of pigeonholing a case of violation of the Contract Labor law submitted to him in December last. In response Mr. Mott said that he didn't believe the Grand Jury would indict on the evidence which was offered at the time.

"Wouldn't it have been proper to give the Grand Jury a chance?" asked Senator Hill, who remarked that it was plain that some one had violated the law.

Mr. Mott replied that he was investigating the matter and that he hadn't the slightest interest in protecting violators of the law. He had been in office three years and in that time there had been no convictions on criminal charges. There had been compromises in civil actions.

William J. O'Brien, waiking delegate for the Granite Cutters' Union, said he had visited Ellis Island and was convinced that the Contract Labor law was constantly broken.

Frank Geblisc, a Bleecker street banker, said that sometimes immigrants fail into the hands of sharks. "I can't tell their real names," he said, "because as soon as he becomes a shark an Italian changes his name, generally taking an Irish name, such as O'Brien or Murphy. Bankers frequently fax laborers as high as $25 a head to get them work in the Street Cleaning Department and other lines of work."

George H. Thobe, an immigrant inspector, was the next witness. Mr. Thobe said he was from Covington, Ky., where he had run against Secretary Carlisle as the workingmen's candidate for Congress. Witness began to testify without being sworn, When his attention was called to the fact he said: "Kentuckians always tell the truth." Thobe said that many immigrants had told him that they had come to this country with aid from the Hirsch fund. Meyer b. Isaacs, Fresident of the Baron Hirsch Fund, at the request of the committee, told in detail the character of the work done by the trustees of the said: "Kentuckians always tell the truth." Thobe said that many immigrants had told him that they had come to this country with aid from the Hirsch fund.

NURSE MOORE'S TROUBLES. Is an Accusation of Arson Made Against

Him One of Many Persecutions Thomas Moore, a nurse in one of the institutions on the Brooklyn Poor Farms in Kings Park, was tried behind closed doors in Justice Ransom's court in Emithtown yesterday on a charge of setting fire to his own house, which was burned in March last, for the purpose of getting the insurance. Every effort was made to keep the proceedings strictly secret. The tnesses were admitted one at a time. It is said that one witness testified to seeing Moore and his wife fire the house from the outside. while another swore that the flames first appeared inside the house. In the minds of many persons in Kings Park this charge of arson is a culmination of a series of persecutions from which Moore is alleged to have been suffering since his advent into that place seven years ago. At alleged to have been suffering since his advent into that place seven years ago. At that time he resigned as a nurse in the Flatbush Asylum to accept his present place. His troubles are alleged to have begun when he declined to pay Contractor George Soper for building his house. Moore said it was a botched job, but Soper sued and obtained a judgment. Following this it is said Moore's family were hooted at he the street, while village boys played all manner of pranks about his place. Next his cesw was found cruelly mutilated in the stable, and a few nights later his chickens had their necks wrung and were strewn about the yard. Some time later the bodies of his two dogs were found in an unused cistern on an adjoining farm.

Several weeks ago Moore had an altercation with his old enemy, Contractor Soper, who, it is alleged, brought the dispute to a crisis by hurling a stone at Moore which inflicted a severe wound. On Moore's complaint a warrant was issued for his assailant by Justice Strawsen of Northport, but Soper disappeared before it could be served. Later he was arrested and sent to jall in default of $15 fine. After he had spent two days in jail his wife secured his release by paying the fine. Ever since the burning of Moore's house there has been a standing reward of $250 offered by the insurance company who issued the policy on the place for the arrest and conviction of the incendiary. It is generally believed that Moore is innocent of the charge.

THE FAIR PAYS SOMETHING MORE THAN EXPENSES.

More Than One-fourth of the 1,557,328 Vis-liors Last Month Went in on Passes— Argument in the Suit for an Injunction, Governor and Mrs. Flower Entertained. CHICAGO, June 2.—Heavy clouds that threatened a downpour of rain this morning did not keep visitors away from the Fair, and a good-sized army of rain-coated, rubber-shod, and umbrella-equipped people entered the grounds. The large attendance yesterday was a surprise to the Fair officials, as the weather was not so favorable as to-day. The expenses of running the Fair in the future will be about $100,000 a week, with perhaps a little excess for Sunday. Reductions in the number of employees are being made every day. The estimate of expenses is made by Commissioner Schwab, also a member of the Council of Administration, and is the result of careful investigation. The Council of Administration first named $15,000 a day as the amount necessary to secure the actual service needed, but it was found to be too small, and was increased to $100,000 for six days, which, it is believed, will insure satisfactory results. The auditor is now engaged in figuring up the receipts and expenditures for the first month, and has progressed far enough to show that the receipts will exceed the expenditures by about $250,000. The receipts averaged about $24,000 a day. The daily expenditures have not been determined. The revised returns of admissions to the Fair during the month of May vary in many cases from those given from day to day. They

AN INSTRUCTIVE EXHIBIT.

The Health Department's Contribution the Chicago World's Fair.

The exhibit of the Health Department of this city is now ready for shipment to the World's Fair. It consists of a handsomely bound volume containing samples of the different forms of certificates and circulars issued. The exhibit is ingeniously arranged, showing the work of the department in every stage. There is an original complaint from a citizen about a tenement, and the blanks that follow show how the nulsance was investigated and finally how the nulsance was investigated and maily abated.

Accompanying the volume will be photographs of the various hospitals under the charge of the department and the boats used in transferring the patients. A map of North Brother Island, showing the Riverside Hospital and other contagious disease pavilions, will also be shown.

"I am inclined to believe that Christian people ought not to assist in any way in making successful an Exhibition which would never have received the approval and support of the people of the United States in its preparation if it had ever been supposed that when the Exposition was finally opened the provisions of the acts of Congress authorizing and assisting it were to be ignored, in deflance of the public sentiment of what is supposed to be a large majority of the population of this country."

frief Reviews of Important and Interesting

Bret Harte's story. "Sally Dows" (Houghton. Mifflin & Co.), is altogether characteristic and particularly delightful. Sally Dows is a Geor-gia girl. A dead Confederate cavalryman comes riding up to a Federal battery and is pitched sprawling over a cannon as his horse to Miss Saily Dows. In the pocket of another Confederate trooper, killed in the same en-gagement, is another letter, also addressed to Miss Sally Dows. Three years later, after the war, the handsome officer who commanded the Federal battery finds Sally Dows superintending a great Georgia farm and making it pay. At rare intervals the reader of fiction is enabled to feel in his bones that a heroine is pretty, and that is the way the reader of this piece of fiction will feel about Sally Dows. She is overwhelmingly pretty. She is, moreover, very wise, very witty, and very proficient in the Georgia dialect. Like women in Mr. Harte's stories, she is a good deal of a riddle. There is fine character drawing and absorbing parrative in the tale. Sometimes, in other stories, the author has been betrayed into extravagances. There is one rather daring venture here, but nothing worse is to be said of it after all, than that it is rather daring. "Sally Dowa" is a rarely good story. It is an absorbing tale and a delightful picture. It has force and subtlety. There is not much, if any, story telling which is more skilfully done. Three other stories, "The Conspiracy of Mrs. Bunker," "The Transformation of Buckeye Camp," and "Their Uncle from California." fill out a volume which no novel reader should miss. "Jean Berny, Sailor," translated from the French of Pierre Loti by E. P. Robins (Cassell Company), is the story of a youth possessed of a fatal sort of indolence. Jean Berny dreams and never acts. He brings sorrow upon his mother and his grandfather. They go hungry while he idles. He is too lazy to learn enough to be an officer. He gives himself up to the mere physical enjoyment of being alive and in health. To be rocked by the billows and to be aware of the firmness and suppleness of the muscles under his loose sailor clothing seems to fill the measure of his desires. He feebly wishes to do something for his mother and grandfather; but the sense of his duty to them is not strong enough to turn him to the study of hydrography and navigation. He is an innocent sailor. except in this negative way. He has, to be sure, three sweethearts in the course of the story, but they are entirely respectable, and he runs away from them all, very soon after making their acquaintance, just as he does from his duty to his mother and grandfather at home. Healthy as he is he does not last long. He catches a fever in China, dies, and is buried at sea. The grandfather dies. too, and the mother is left in poverty to find what solace she may in resignation and faith. Pierre Loti likes to take the gentle reader's hand and lead him out to hear the wind in the willows and the cypresses. The gentle reader will find plenty of mournful sentimentality in this story. Mrs. Frank Leslie, in an essay upon the question "Are Men Gay Deceivers?" replies that few men have enough tact to be really deceitful. Men try to be deceitful, but are really transparent, while it is the women themselves who are deceitful in point of fact. This is one of a collection of upward of thirty essays by Mrs. Leslie, which are published in a volume (F. Tennyson Neely). "The American Man," "Men Women Admire," "What is a Lady?" and "Angels Have Blonde Hair" are the titles of some of the others. Mrs. Leslie's opinion of the men is made prett" clear in some of these essays. It is not rudely ex-pressed. There is nothing here to remind one of the work of the tumultuous McCloskey in Miss Maggie Cline's song. But we guess that sensitive male readers will have no difficulty in understanding "where they are at" in the gentle essayist's estimation.

Mr. Walter Herries Pollock has amusing conceits and a fairly droll way of putting things. The reader will find proof of this in a book of short stories of his which is published under the title of "King Zub" (Tait, Sons & Co.). "King Zub" is a tale setting forth the interdependence and the soul relationship existing between a gentleman and his dog. Another tale is concerned with an amateur actor of much social distinction, who can never express himself properly except under the stimulus afforded by the presence of a large audience, and who endeavors to accommodate this idiosyncrasy in making an avowal of love to a lady whom he wishes to marry. Nine stories are contained in the book. They have ommendation of brevity, as wel merit of being ingenious and amusing.

Mr. Abraham G. Jennings seems to have had no trouble at all in performing the task which he set for himself in his namphlet entitled "The Mossic Record of the Creation Explained" (Fleming H. Reveil Company). He says the days spoken of in the first chapter of Genesis were ordinary days of twenty-four hours each. They were sufficiently long for all the work attributed to them, and the work was done precisely as the Mosaic record says. The pamphlet is not, perhaps, exactly an explanation. It is rather a review and an ex-pression of acquiescence. It has the merit of ooking at things simply and of saying things in the same manner. It will puzzle nobody. It is perfectly clear.

"Six-Cent Sam's" is a place where undistinguished philosophers go to est and tell stories. Mr. Julian Hawthorne is the discoverer of it, and he has gathered some of the stories and published them in a volume named after the place (Price-McGill Company, St. Paull. We have here the author's story. the virtuoso's story, the electrical engineer's story, the Captain's story, the unseen man's story, the swarthy man's story, and a number of other stories. The stories have variety and the interest which the concern with them of so skilful and discriminating a workman a

Mr. Hawthorne promises.
A second series of Mr. William Winter's "Shadows of the Stage" is published by Macmillan & Co. This, like the previous volume, is made up of the dramatic criticisms originalwritten by Mr. Winter for the Tribune and or the periodicals. Twenty-eight essays are included in the present little book, among them essays upon the acting of Ada Rehan. Clara Morris, Lawrence Barrett, Richard Mansfield, Irving, Coquelin, and a number of others. Not all of these essays are in the laudatory spirit Mr. Winter has found things which are not laudatory to say of Coquelin and Bernbardt, and of Wilson Barrett's Hamiel, and some of these things are in the book. "Appleton's General Guide to the United States and Canada" is published for 1893. It takes note of new rallroad facilities and new resorts, has new maps, illustrations, and itin eraries, and a description of the characteristic estures of the World's Fair (D. Appleton

CAN'T GET HIS CHILDREN.

They Were Indentured When He Was Pool and Had Abandoned Them. In 1886 William Stanton and his wife and three children lived in Jersey City. Stanton was a steady man and made a good living for his family. In the latter part of 1886 Mra. Stanton died. Her husband took to drinking and neglected his children. He finally abandoned them. Poormaster John E. Hewitt sent them to the county almshouse at Snake Hill on May 14, 1887. on May 14, 1887. The father drifted away, and his friends in Jersey City heard nothing from him until yesterday. He was well dressed and had an air of prosperity about him which indicated a change in his fortunes.

He was accompanied by a woman whom he introduced as his wife and who seemed to be proud of her husband. Stanton and his wife went to the almshouse, and learned there that his voungest child died in 1880. The other two, William and May, aged 7 and 8 respectively, had been indentured by the Board of Fresholders to Mr. and Mrs. Abell of 78 Griffith street, Jersey City Heights. Stanton and his swife called on the Abells, and had a talk with the children. May remembered her father, and she and her brother were willing to go with him, but the Abells refused to surrender them. Stanton consulted Director Bruggemann of the Board of Freeholders. He said he had reformed and married sgain, and he was anxious to get possession of his children, as he is now well able to support them. Mrs. Stanton corroborated her husband's statement, and said she was desirous of having the children with her, and she would take good care of them.

Director Bruggemann sympathized with Stanton, but said he could do nothing. The children, he said, were legally indentured to Mr. and Mrs. Abell, and could not be taken away from them unless they were willing to surrender them. Stanton said he would consult a lawyer.

SUGGESTION FROM LAPAYETTE POST. Grand Army Organizations As Agents to In-vestigate Pension Claims.

Lafayette Post, G. A. R., of this city, gave out for publication yesterday, with the approval of Commander-in-Chief A. G. Weissert, who was in the city for that purpose, resolu tions which the Post passed early last month and which were called forth by the resolutions adopted by Noah I. Farnham Post against indiscriminate pensioning.

The resolution of Lafayette Post which was drawn by a committee of which James A.
Rianchard. ex-President of the Republican Ciub, was Chairman, "deprecates wholesale charges" against the G. A. R. pensioners and pension agents, and suggests plans for preventing pension frauds. One of its plans is to make the Grand Army posts special agents of the lension Bureau to investigate and report

Locked Up Several Hours in a Furnace.

Buffalo, June 2 .- John Willis, an employee of the Buffalo Furnace Company, had a terrible experience yesterday, which may result in his death. Willis entered a furnace to clean it out, and the door, which fastens with a snap, closed behind him. All efforts to attract the attention of his fellow workmen were unavailing, and the fumes of carbonic acid gas gradually overcame him until he sank unconsolous. He was not discovered for several hours, and when taken out was barely alive. Physicians worked over him all night at the hospital, and this morning they say there is a bare chance of his recovery. of his recovery.

Four Women Couldn't Prevent the Saleid NORTH ADAMS, Mass., June 2-Charles Jones, 61 years old, a once prominent manu facturer of this town, who had been troubled facturer of this town, who had been troubled with melancholia, told his wife yesterday that he had made up his mind to kill himself. He drew a revolver from his pocket, and his wife, her two sisters and mother endeavored to get the wearon from him. He started for the front door, with the women clinging to him, and as he crossed the threshold shot himself through the head. Death was instantaneous.

No Trace of Ira Howland's Stolen Body. BATAVIA, N. Y., June 2.-Not the slightest clue has thus far been gained to the where abouts of the body of Ira Howland, which was stolen from the cemetery at Alabama, or to the parties who exhumed it. The widow ap-pears to be in great distress of mind over the suspicion that the remains were removed by the family, and says she courts a full investi-gation. The District Attorney is pursuing a diligent search, but so far without success.

tached to St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church in Brooklyn the sacred concert which was to have been given under its direction next Tuesday night has been postponed, and may be abandoned altogether. All the trouble has been over the hiring of the quartet of another church to take part in the concert. This arrangement did not prove satisfactory to the leading vocalists in the society, who thought they had talent enough in their own ranks, and is also said to be in direct conflict with the rules governing such organizations. More than half the members of the society are said to have handed in their resignations, and all preparations for the concert have been stopped.
